

Transition

Transitioning for teens and young adults with special educational or healthcare needs requires planning in several areas to make life easier. The Delaware Disability Hub (DeIDHub) website was created to assist students in the transition years, their parents or caregivers and professionals by providing resources, connections, guidance and information from around the country. Although the DeIDHub covers the teen years forward, parents or caregivers need to start thinking about the transition years at a much earlier age to ensure a child reaches their full potential.

The GACEC Team

GACEC staff includes an Executive Director – Pam Weir, Officer Manager – Kathie Cherry, and Administrative Coordinator – Lacie Spence. The GACEC is centrally located in Dover and provides advice and information statewide. Contact the GACEC Team if you have questions on the DeIDHub or the GACEC.”

Toolkits, Timelines, and Videos

Transitioning is not a new subject, but it may be new for you or someone in your care. Every state has transition resources and organizations that assist those in the transitional years. The DeIDHub has toolkits and toolboxes to help you locate the information you need in each of the categories, along with videos on how to access various services and a timeline to assist with knowing when you should plan to do certain things along your transition journey. The Governor's Advisory Council for Exceptional Citizens of Delaware created the DeIDHub to align with the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) that focuses on transitioning into post-secondary education and independent living. Check it out to learn more about transitioning.
